

SISTERS FOLK FESTIVAL

The Sisters Folk Festival, Inc. – A Year-Round Cultural Arts Organization. SFF has been a mainstay non-profit organization for the Sisters community, and has immeasurably supported the Sisters School District and its students in particular. Founded in 1995 through the efforts of numerous individuals, including creative director Brad Tisdale, the SFF has contributed millions of dollars and countless hours to the local community through its multitude of events and projects. While primarily known as the entity behind the world-famous Sisters Folk Festival (which has expanded into a year-round collection of community events, beyond the fall Folk Festival), the SFF has become a mainstay for fundraising and arts education in the Sisters community. In addition to the Folk Festival and a Winter Concert Series, the SFF is responsible for (i) the Americana Project and the American Song Academy, innovative music and arts education programs for Sisters students that are collaborations among the SFF, Creative Education Resources, and the Sisters School District, (ii) My Own Two Hands, which raises funds and provides students with access to music, visual arts, dance and literary arts, and, (iii) Sisters Studio to School, a collaboration between the SFF and the Sisters School District. These are just some of the many education and fundraising programs organized and supported by the SFF. Besides the numerous contributions the SFF and its volunteers have made, SFF has set a national example for how one organization can fully integrate cultural arts into a community – Enriching Lives Through the Arts.
